

ADDRESSING COMMON CONCERNS

exploring fears, brick by brick

All these LEGO pieces represent a worry or concern families often have.

Each person chooses a tiny bag. I encourage them to look at the toy and see what comes to their minds before they read the enclosed card. There really aren't any wrong answers when folks are interpreting things and coming up with their own ideas. If they can't think of anything, they can share the one on the card.

As a facilitator, you offer more information about the idea, concept, or possibility. Sharing evidence and clarifying misconceptions is also important.